

In the blue corner is the being supreme, the lord of love and reigning world champion in the infinite battle of Good vs. Evil, the one and only, God Almighty. In the red corner is heaven's outcast, the devil from down below, the one and only Master of Deception and Father of Lies, The Prince of Darkness. That is pretty much how the story goes, or at least that is the tale many people tell. But Satan, he is a complicated entity. There is much more to him than most people know. He is not just a devil with a pitchfork who stands on your shoulder telling you to steal a candy bar; he has a long history, and he has gotten up to stuff you would not believe. Today you are going to learn a lot more about this overlord of the underworld! Ok, so first you need to know who Satan is. It is a bit more complicated than you think, but we will try and make this one as short as we can. There is a kind of devil in all the Abrahamic religions, but in Christianity, he plays a bigger role than he does in Judaism and Islam. In all three religions, Satan is there to make people impure, to lure them to the dark side. The Old Testament talks about an entity that is an adversary of God. He is there in the Book of Job, making life hard for Job. He kills Job's children, his servants, and for good measure, he covers Job in boils. He does all this to see if Job will renounce his belief in God. So, there you go, Satan is there to mess with people's beliefs. Still, in that old book he was far from being a cloven-hoofed beast with horns that can spin a young girl's head around. In the New Testament, there is talk of fallen angels. In the story of Matthew, there is a devil-type thing that tries to persuade Jesus to give up his belief in God. He is yet again the tempter, the evil to all the good in the world. In short, there are lots of stories. There's Lucifer, sometimes interchangeable as Satan, who is said to have rebelled against God, and with a gang of other fallen angels, they wage war against God. Then you have Beelzebub, a flying demon who also is a kind of a Satan character. In the Book of Revelations, you have the Red Serpent, which you could call devilish, but what about this pitchfork swinging, constantly cursing guy who isn't very photogenic? Well, he was made up by some creative folks in the Middle Ages. Dante Alighieri wrote about Satan in The Divine Comedy in the early 14th century. This is how Satan is described in the "Inferno" part: He has three faces. He has a chest of ice. He has bat-like wings, crunching teeth, and he is generally a rotten thing. When the King James Bible became a best-seller after it was published in 1611, Lucifer, aka, the "Morning Star", played a big part, as it did in John Milton's 1667 masterpiece poem, "Paradise Lost". Now we have a much more wicked tempter, a more monstrous figure who is a real brute. Satan was no longer just an angel that had switched jobs, he was something more terrifying. The cloven hooves and horns were often a feature, which relates back to Pan, a mythological half-goat, half-man figure that was always wild and irrepressibly horny. When you think about famine, plague, and the rest of the crappy things that made Europe a horrible home for a long time, it only makes sense that this devil turned into something terrifying. This is the guy evangelists conjure up in their nightmares. He is the entity that possessed witches and made Hollywood tons of money. The bottom line is the devil evolved throughout history. Ok, we had to get that out of the way. Now for some short facts. Not surprisingly, when you go filling people's heads with stories of this beast, it affects some folks in a bad way. In 2018, an Australian man beat his best friend to death because he thought his friend was Satan. Satanic serial killer, Richard Ramirez, once shouted at a victim, "Swear on Satan." This one survived. Many did not. In fact, a lot of killers have claimed to either be in the service of Satan or believe they are killing Satan. Either way, most people would believe Satan is not to blame. As you will see in this show, the devil is often a scapegoat. Well, that is what the law thinks. A 2016 Gallup poll revealed 79% of the American respondents said they believed in God, but only 61% of people said they believed in the devil. A similar poll went out in the UK, but only 18% of people said they believed in the devil. U.S. televangelist Paul Crouch once said that if you play a part of Led Zeppelin's song "Stairway to Heaven" backward there is a Satanic message in there. This is how it allegedly goes: "Here's to my sweet Satan. The one whose little path would make me sad, whose power is Satan. He will give those with him 666. There was a little toolshed where he made us suffer, sad Satan." Guitarist Jimmy Page once said it was hard enough to write the songs forwards, never mind backward, too. By the way, some experts now say the number in the bible that represents the number of the beast is 616.

There is a Church of Satan, but its founders do not actually believe Satan, or God for that matter, exists. One of the high priests said believers are "insane" and he says Satan just represents someone who is an "adversary" or an "opposer", someone who questions everything. Recently, a British member of the Church of Satan said Satanism has less to do with doing bad things than it does with being atheist and libertarian. In the U.S., you can pay $225 and get a lifetime membership for the Church of Satan. Some people believe if Jesus is the son of God, then the anti-Christ is the son of Satan. An example would be Damien Thorn in the Omen movies. It has been said the first of those Omen movies was cursed, with the reason being a lot of unlucky things happened to the cast and crew. The weirdest of them all involved effects artist John Richardson. He was the guy responsible for creating the famous decapitation scene in the movie. During the filming of his next movie, he got into a car crash. He survived, but his passenger was decapitated. On top of that, an animal trainer was killed by a tiger after making The Omen, and during the filming of The Omen, a stuntman was attacked by trained Rottweilers. The Pope has been accused of being the antichrist from time to time. Martin Luther once said the Pope "is the true end times Antichrist who has raised himself over and set himself against Christ." Quite a few American presidents have at one point been accused of being the antichrist. Those include Donald Trump, Barack Obama, John F. Kennedy, and Ronald Reagan. Hilary Clinton has been called out, too. Ok, so some people think the mark of the beast will appear on us all at some point. It comes from something written in the Book of Revelations. It goes like this: "He causes all, both small and great, rich, and poor, free and slave, to receive a mark on their right hand or on their foreheads, and that no one may buy or sell except one who has the mark or the name of the beast, or the number of his name." What could that mean? Maybe subcutaneous technology could be the mark of the beast. In the past, people used to say the number 666 was hidden in barcodes. That has been debunked, but people have now moved onto microchips under the skin. Some evangelicals have already said those chips will be the mark of the beast that gets under everyone's skin. Quite a few well-known people have said the Freemasons worship the devil. We do not have any proof to back that up. Now we will talk about some dark things the devil has supposedly been involved with. According to the "Canon Episcopi", a text of medieval canon law dating back to the 10th century, witchcraft was alive and well in Europe back then. It says witches flew around on broomsticks, and one of their favorite destinations was the forest. The forest is where they made love to demons, and sometimes killed infants in the name of Satan. Things got much more heated in the 15th century. That was when the book "Malleus Maleficarum" was written, a treatise on witches that detailed the exploits of people possessed by Satan. It might sound funny to you, but it led to massive persecution of people accused of being witches. Thousands of people were tortured and killed during decades of witch hunts. The first European folks to make the New World their home was not much better. The Puritans of New England talked about babies being born with claws and horns, which was a sure sign the devil had infiltrated the woman. Some of those puritans believed the Native Americans were "children of the Devil." It was mostly thanks to the Enlightenment thinkers in the 17th and 18th centuries that belief in witchcraft started to die. Unfortunately, some parts of Europe and the New World remained in the dark and dismissed what those thinkers said. Witch hunts stopped in most places, but belief in Satan remained strong. Satan does not just appear in Christian bibles, he also shows up in the Talmud and has been discussed by Jewish rabbis at length, with some positing that Satan was involved in the story of Moses returning from Mount Sinai and that he may have played a role in the Purim story, which tells of how the Jews were saved from the Persian Empire. And speaking of the Talmud, the origin of the name Satan comes from the Hebrew word which means "opposer" or "adversary" and was used in the Hebrew bible as a term for both human enemies of the Jewish people, as well as supernatural foes. In 1966, after the Beatles member John Lennon said his band was "more popular than Jesus", people in the Southern United States took to burning Beatles' records even if they loved them. Some people believe Lennon made a pact with the devil so he could get famous. The devil got his due, though, because Lennon was shot dead in the street. In the 1960s, the Beatles were accused of putting Satanic messages in their music. Decades later, an article in the Vatican newspaper praised the band for their melodic tunes. Now for something that may frighten you. In 2018, The Atlantic reported that priests in the U.S. were being asked to perform an unusual number of exorcisms. The article said, "The official exorcist for Indianapolis has received 1,700 requests so far in 2018." That is a lot for just one state, especially as there are only around 100 official Catholic exorcists in the U.S. In 2020, in Panama, 7 people died in a mass exorcism. The victims included a pregnant woman and her 5 young kids. An extremist religious group was blamed for the deaths when it was discovered members of the group held native's captive and beat them with bibles, burned them with torches, and cut them with machetes. This sect was denounced as "Satanic" by local church authorities. The novel "The Exorcist" was partly based on the alleged demonic possession of a 14-year-old American kid known as Roland Doe. That was not his real name. The exorcism was kind of like the movie, in that the boy allegedly spoke in a weird voice, things flew on their own around the room and the kid could not stand to be near a holy cross. At one-point marks just appeared on the kid's body. It is also said he got up and broke a priest's nose. In 2014, 2 women in the U.S. were charged with murder after killing 2 children, aged 1 and 2, during an exorcism. The women said the kids' eyes had turned black due to the devil being inside them. They badly beat two older kids, but they thankfully survived the ordeal. We found more recent cases of children being killed in exorcisms in the U.S., Europe, and elsewhere. If you think belief in demonic possession is dead, you are very wrong. Parts of the bible talk about Jesus doing exorcisms. This is from Mark 1:25/6, "Jesus rebuked him, saying, 'Be silent, and come out of him!' And the unclean spirit, convulsing him and crying out with a loud voice, came out of him." It is a pity all exorcisms are not so quick and easy. The saying, "The devil is in the details" actually comes from, "God is in the details." Satan goes by other names as well as the devil, including, Beelzebub, Mephistopheles, the Prince of Darkness, Lord of the Flies, the Antichrist, the Father of Lies, and Moloch. Ok, back to more dark details. In 1692, in Salem Village, Massachusetts, a group of young girls were accused of being in league with Satan. What happened next became known as the Salem Witch Trials. The accused girls, as well as women, and men, appeared at a special court to address the accusation that they were getting friendly with the devil, which of course was not true at all. 20 people in all were hanged by the neck in Salem for the crime of practicing the devil's magic, but over time around 150 people were accused of being witches. One of the men who was executed was pressed to death, which had to be a very painful way to go. The authorities thought if he was tortured, he might disclose information, but there were not any beans to spill. A Massachusetts General Court soon reversed the guilty verdicts, but that came too late for the 20 victims. The youngest of the accused was a 4yr old girl named Dorothy Good. She told the court her mom had been talking to the devil. She was also said to bite people like a wild animal. The next fact is just plain crazy. Unbelievably, animals played a big part in the hysteria that happened at Salem. cats, dogs, and other animals were also said to be possessed by Satan. Some folks believed the animals were a kind of team member for the witches, and like some of the accused witches, they had to go. In one instance, a girl had convulsions and it was believed she was a witch. She said the neighbor's dog had bewitched her. That dog was immediately shot. A local minister later declared the dog innocent of any wrongdoing. Later, another mutt took a bullet, even though the locals said it was a victim of evil. Did they really do a float test on accused witches, or is that just made up? It is not fiction at all and was in vogue in the 17th century. Sometimes called "dunking" or "ordeal by water", it would involve throwing a person, usually a woman, into a river. If she sank, she was innocent of working with the prince of darkness, but if she floated, well, obviously she was in league with Satan. You might ask what the rationale was behind that, but let us remember the Age of Reason was still a century away. Some people said water was pure, and that is why it would not accept witches. You really would not want to show off your treading-water skills in those days. You might wonder what the difference is between a demon and the devil? Basically, the devil is the CEO of evil and demons are his managers. You could say those who demons possess are the folks on the lower end of the pay scale. The American anthropologist, Erika Bourguignon, spent a lifetime studying demons and she said 488 societies in the world believed in demonic possession. You do not need Satan to have demons, but you need evil. In the past, if you were mentally ill sometimes people would say you were a victim of demonic possession. That still happens today in some societies. A psychiatrist in northern Thailand once said he took his team to the villages far from the city. In some villages he found autistic kids locked in cages. Their families would offer chicken sacrifices to the evil spirit so it would leave the kid's body. Coming up next is something called "The Satan Defense." Satan gets the blame for a lot of bad things that people do, so you could call the poor fella a handy scapegoat. In 2016, a guy appeared in court after shooting 2 teenagers. One of them died and the other was badly injured. What was the guy's defense? He said Satan made him do it and so he was innocent. The guy, named Kody Lott, was incensed when the media said killing 2 kids on their way home from school for absolutely nothing was senseless. Lott said the devil told him to do it, so how was it senseless. He will stay in prison until at least 2046. God might feature in the courtroom, but the justice system has no time for Satan. That is kind of weird when you think about it. Satan has little to do with Halloween. No one is exactly sure how the tradition started, but it likely goes back to harvest festivals that were held pre-Christianity. The Christians, however, got hold of it and started calling it All Hallows' Day, which was a day to celebrate saints and the faithful that had died. This somehow turned into a night where people walk around dressed as Hello Kitty and maniacs put glass in candy. This next one is seriously messed up. There is no shortage of people who claim they are the devil. These egomaniacs are everywhere and they span all age groups. A recent case involved a naked woman breaking into a family's house. The owner told her to leave, to which the woman laughed and then claimed she was the devil. All hell broke loose when the woman attacked the man and his family, even though he had a gun. 39 shots were fired but the woman was not hit. Not only that, but she also managed to fight off all the family. The man later said, "She had the strength of 4 grown men." Maybe she was the devil, or she had been taking some serious drugs. You can find multiple stories every year in the USA where people who do horrible things claim to be the devil. For some reason they are usually women. There is a term, "She-Devil", but it usually refers to a woman who manipulates men and does horrible things to them. While sometimes we refer to Satan as a 'he' or super-reality, the devil is sexless. However, in Hebrew, the noun for Satan is a masculine noun. If Satan is real, he must work around the clock, so much so he makes Elon Musk look lazy. That is because around 150,000 people die in the world every day of the week. Considering most of those people will not be faithful to God and will no doubt have a rap sheet of sins a mile long, the intake process for hell must keep Satan busy. In the bible, it does not say Satan created Hell. Nope, he was condemned to live in the inferno. He would probably prefer a three-bedroom suite in Manhattan, but sinners cannot be choosers. The bible teaches us that Satan spends most of his time on Earth. Hell is a little confusing, so we thought we would refer to that paragon of truth, Billy Graham. In his writing he says the "everlasting fire was created for the devil and his angels", and he also says that the devil can roam "through the earth going back and forth in it". There is also the theory that sinners will be cast into the pits of hell only on judgment day, so right now they are on remand. Those who wrote the big book talk about Jesus mentioning "eternal life" and "eternal punishment", but some Christian scholars argue that eternal punishment just means being wiped out, like completely being deleted from the big server in the sky. So, hell could be absolutely nothing. The idea of a goat-man with a pitchfork burning your toes with his cigar is entirely a modern fancy. It would have been alien to JC. 11. The French philosopher Jean-Paul Sartre wrote a play about hell called, "No Exit." A well-known phrase from that play is, "Hell is other people." In the play, people die and end up in a waiting room, but the thing is, they are there for eternity. They soon get on each other's nerves, and that waiting room becomes a kind of hell. It sounds a lot like social media. Ok, we have reached the top ten now, time to ramp up the evil. Some Christians, mostly of the ilk that have Jesus' bumper stickers, believe in something called "The Rapture." This is when the world ends and the goodies on Earth with the once faithful dead will be beamed up "in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." This great kidnapping will lead to eternity in heaven. As for those left behind, things are not supposed to be great for them. Maybe they will have a date with Satan at some point, or they might go on to act in a very popular TV series. By the way, most Christians do not actually believe the big snatch will ever happen. God was sometimes wrathful; you certainly did not want to get on the wrong side of God. In Genesis 3:14, God has some stern words with Satan, saying, "Cursed are you above all livestock and all wild animals! You will crawl on your belly and you will eat dust all the days of your life." You should know that you should not make deals with Satan because whatever he gives, he will take back double. He once offered Jesus all the kingdoms of the world, but in the small print, there was a proviso stating that in return Jesus had to worship Satan. Jesus' response to this offer was, "Away from me, Satan!" You have heard of the Seven Deadly Sins, but did you know some people say behind each 1 is a demon who can tempt you into committing that sin. The sins are: Pride, envy, wrath, sloth, greed, gluttony, and lust. Satan himself is behind wrath. A prince of hell named Belphegor is the gluttony guy. He tries to convince folks to get rich, which we all know in the real-world gluttony has its fair share of problems. What do you think is the most committed sin by men? Greed? Sloth? It is lust, according to some research we read. Think about how often every day you have a sexual thought... for women that sin was pride. Speaking of sexual thoughts, there are demons called Incubi and succubus. The former is a demon in male form that makes love to women in their sleep and the latter does the same but she is female and chooses sleeping men. Such stories were around a long time before Christ appeared on the scene, so they are not only Christian stories. In the past, these demons were sometimes accused of messing with a man's health, while women were said to sometimes be impregnated by them. Maybe demons were not the problem... Now for something very real. There is a book called "The Devil's Bible" that was written by a monk over a period of decades in the 13th century. It is quite the tome, too, weighing in at 165 pounds (75kg). Some people believe the devil himself was behind the book, but most folks think that the writer just had a lot of time on his hands. If you wrote all day every day the book would take about 20 years to finish. It got the name Devil's Bible because of an illustration on page 290. The legend behind the book says that a monk had broken his vows and faced being walled up alive. His other option was to agree to write a book that contained all human knowledge. That was not going to be easy, but what is a monk going to do. He tried writing the book, but it was too hard, so the story goes that he asked Lucifer for help in exchange for his soul. All he had to do was feature that picture of the devil. Ok, so how would you contact the devil if you wanted to do a deal with him? He is obviously a busy demon, and you can bet he has a lot of requests. We looked online for, "How to contact Satan", but there are no clear guidelines. There are a bunch of rituals you can find online that tell you how to summon demons, which usually involve evocation spells. There is a new book out there containing such spells, although the International Association of Exorcists condemned it saying it was like putting a grenade in people's hands. It is aimed at kids, too, telling them if they have too much homework or life is not going so well, they might want to draw some lines on the floor and "dial up some demons." The good news is that after looking at a bunch of Christian websites not one agreed that the devil can read your thoughts. Satan, unlike God, is not omniscient. Nowhere in the bible does it say the devil can plant things in your head. Watch out though, because this is in the bible: "Siblings, be sober, be watchful. Your adversary the devil prowls around like a roaring lion, seeking someone to devour. Resist him, firm in your faith." An interpretation of this could be that the devil is always there, just waiting for if you to show some weakness. When he sees you are weak, he can somehow use his trickery to create circumstances around you that will tempt you to sin. He also has a network of demons doing such bad work, demons that must have been busy during all those Catholic Church abuse scandals. So, what is the fate of Satan? Can't we just get rid of him? According to the Book of Revelation, at some point Satan will be forced to hang up his gloves. This is what is written about his forced retirement. "And the devil, who deceived them, was thrown into the lake of burning sulfur, where the beast and the false prophet had been thrown. They will be tormented day and night for ever and ever." The skulls and artifacts in this video are authentic from sites all around the globe feel free to share but please do not download and respect the copyrights herein viewer discretion advised so tell me straight rabbi have any powerful people attempted to bury this knowledge I tried to figure out what was the disconnect in history this video is about the Nephilim a mystery that goes back even further than Babylon enjoy the ride Nephilim were on the earth in those days and also afterwards when the sons of god went in to the daughters of men and bore children by them these were the mighty ones of old famous warriors of ancient such a times I researched something interesting there was a second council in Constantinople the from the early roman church this was in 553 right indeed this guy here was found in Peru and here's a little baby one from Peru take a look at that right there little fingers on that going up that long head this of course is Siberia Russia they're even saying that men cannot be possessed of demons in any shape form or fashion look at the size of the mallet on that one from Peru he almost doesn't look friendly does he and this one here is from the sands of Iran his is one of apparently about 20 from a dig site in Germany would you say there's anything at all about that guy there it doesn't look I don't know human this one was found in Bolivia hold on to your seeds we're going to go over some unique features on these long heads in just a minute also found in Russia Peru the sheer mass on the back of some of these is astounding here's a child being held look at the size of that one in the middle this may be the largest one in terms of head volume out of Peru now we're really starting to leave the it looks human range this guy here was one of 13 found at a dig site in and you Mexico finding a lot of strange anomalies you know you read about giants when Moses and the spies over in Cana and they and they described this land being filled full of giants you know when the spies come back they said you know we're the size of grasshoppers compared to these men the word Nephilim often gets translated as giants it is true there have been actual giants in history this is Robert wad low he's the tallest man ever officially recorded in this modern time period at eight feet 11 inches this photograph was taken by Roy Chapman Andrews during an expedition to Mongolia in 1922. the image ran one time in national geographic magazine it was never published in the magazine again these are 6 working fingers and toes I actually found an ancient picture from Babylon of a giant with 6 fingers and toes and the giant is actually holding a lion and he is so large because the lion is curious where the trail can begin to lead when looking at ancient bloodlines when talking about the word Nephilim what we're dealing with is a little bit deeper and darker and larger in scope than giantism a really tall guy or your favorite basketball player the term Nephilim became synonymous with giants because that's what they tended to be it is by no means limited to that meaning in fact the word Nephilim is more of an umbrella term for the hybrid children creatures of any high strangeness which are actual flesh and blood biological products of the banyan ha Elohim the fallen angels you're basically saying the fallen ones genesis chapter 6 verses one through two says that when men began to increase the number of the earth and daughters were born to them the sons of god the term sons of god or the banyan Elohim can mean angels fallen angels or in the book of Enoch the watchers sons of god saw that the daughters of men were beautiful and they married any of them that they chose and had children by them so at this moment without going off of any of the physical evidence and before taking a really deep look at these skulls or peering into the history and just using the text alone in any authentic text whether you're dealing with actual angels or you're talking about fallen angels these are not hallmark card creatures these are extremely powerful entities angels often get depicted in artwork with wings now the ark of the covenant does have two cherubim depicted with wings over the mercy seat but key term here these angels are representing the cherubim at the throne of god in heaven but I can't find one spot in the entirety of the Greek or Hebrew biblical texts where angels dimensional beings bene ha Elohim stepping through into this reality had wings from the angels at the tomb of Jesus Christ no wings all the way back to genesis to the angels that visited Abraham to the angel that dropped the chains from peter's wrist and said get up and come with me every iron locked door opening before their path and soldiers seeming to fall by the wayside unconscious peter had some clout with someone somewhere that night the soldiers that had fallen asleep woke up to be executed the very next day the truth is there are wealth's of these throughout the text the helping hand that seems to arrive in extremely particular moments when all hope might otherwise seem lost or messengers appearing to announce highly specific events in human history events and moments that would everything you know it almost reads like someone's sort of guiding how all this comes out one of the most stunning discoveries of the 20th century is that the entirety of the universe is finite that's actually extremely powerful knowledge reality can appear solid but in truth it's 99.9% empty space the base framework of reality itself at the deepest quantum level is not made of matter but of little statistical probabilities appearing wherever they need to appear next even the majestic ticking minutes of time itself are quantized at 10 to the negative 43 seconds and every single 3D particle pixel of this place is not random in fact they're 10 to the negative 33 centimeters the fabric of reality is finite almost like a pure data live stream and it's not random that's extremely powerful knowledge it was Albert Einstein who once said reality is merely an illusion when you hear the physics guys talking about the universe as a hologram or saying that our reality is a simplified projection of a much more complex reality or saying that time space and matter are synthetic I don't know if I like the term projection it seems far too limiting or mathematicians who might say that the whole place appears to be a product of mathematics which our mathematics are extremely inadequate to describe it is true that a created thing can never understand the full scope of who created it bottom line that this place is couched in a much larger spiritual and dimensional reality these are the words of Paul when writing to the Hebrews do not forget to entertain strangers for some have entertained angels unaware how can a spiritual being an angel or even a whole set of fallen angels give actual birth to its own genetic line of anomalies how can something spiritual dimensional interact with something physical I'm not sure that the lines are quite that black and white it was Jude the half-brother of Jesus Christ mind you this comes right before Jude quotes from Enoch 1-9 Enoch would be the 7th from Adam the great grandfather of Noah in the book of genesis 5 24 and Enoch was not for god took him god really liked Enoch and so Jude is saying even the angels which kept not their first estate angels there is talking about fallen angels the term kept not their first estate has a dual meaning in that sentence not just that they left the heavens but their physical bodies for earthly flesh and material bodies Jude continues but left their own habitation he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day these are actual fragments from the book of Enoch found in the caves of Qumran in Israel dating anywhere between 100 to 400 BC and of course the most famous document and record to come out of those caves was this actual image of a scroll of Isaiah found in those caves which had scholars literally holding their breath until they found out that every single word has an exact precision matching our current text that is uncanny this applies to all of the Hebrew texts by the way even the Greek Jewish texts the fragments from the book of Enoch matched up perfectly with copies found by explorer James Bruce in complete Ethiopian bibles in 1773 the book of Enoch is divided into five sections it's in the book of the watchers where the bulk of the Qumran fragments come from that Enoch is telling you that a set of 200 fallen angels made physical entrance to this place this would have been prior to the flood of Noah as Enoch was the great grandfather of Noah in fact this would have been more than a thousand years before Noah as methuselah the longest living man ever recorded in the biblical text lived 969 years if you do the math on it methuselah actually died the very year or 7 days before the flood curiously the name methuselah means his death shall bring or perhaps more precisely his death shall bring the judgment speaking of strange skulls like this one here are what the archaeological community often refer to as neanderthal skulls like this actual image of a neanderthal skull on the screen here now there are all sorts of variations shapes and sizes of monkey bones on the planet earth monkeys and humans are grandly different in their bone structures this is a human skeleton and this is a set of monkey bones like this actual bone structure of a gorilla on the screen right here out of hundreds and hundreds of thousands if not millions of both human bones and monkey bones such as the infamous skeletal structure of the small monkey Lucy seen on the screen here on the entire face of the whole planet earth there are exactly 0 mixtures of half human half monkey or monkeys becoming humans or the more commonly used terminology there are no missing links this doesn't come as terribly surprising to me because genetically speaking within the DNA of any living breathing organism animals are restricted within their animal kinds they have certain body plans for example horses can breed other variation of horses within their body plans same thing with dogs they can have subtypes underneath that body plan and variations but dogs cannot breed rabbits or horses taking the genetics one step further every living organism its digital software coding its actual is losing coding over time it's weakening deteriorating it's not just animal species that we are systematically and slowly losing not gaining in the order of a thousand to ten thousand different creatures annually depending on whose numbers that you listen to but we're certainly losing things as opposed to gaining them and following suit with that the DNA the actual digital software of life itself for every type of creature is also weakening with every generation the same as would happen is if you make a copy of a copy of anything you're going to see it weaken not strengthen a neanderthal skeleton and skull is absolutely identical to a modern human except for a few key features the bones are thicker stronger more fit also the wisdom teeth down here fit absolutely perfectly these thick brows can vary in size from skull to skull a small detail that a lot of people may not know the human brow of any individual this bone right up here continues to grow just ever so slightly through the entirety of a person's life you may see on an old man's brow he's got a very defined brow so if you were to live two or three or four or 500 years then that much larger brow that you see in denting up right there is precisely how your skull would look when we peer back in history to our oldest written texts we're finding redundant accounts of very long life spans in the biblical texts most absolutely indefinitely in the Sumerian kings list as well as records covering what amounts to little more than settlements following the great flood as is recorded here in the epic of Gilgamesh along with the extended life spans both before and briefly after the flood this is the oldest written epic in the entire world the actual records of King Gilgamesh of Uruk one of the first kings following the great flood these neanderthal skulls have varying sizes of large brows in short what you're looking at with these neanderthal skulls is eerily identical to what a human being would look like if they were much more fit than we are today and had lived varying amounts of hundreds and hundreds of years from a genetic perspective no one actually knows what causes death or initiates the death process capping us out in anywhere between 100 and 120 years almost as if someone flicked a switch off inside the coating every single cell in your entire body is programmed to regenerate and renew itself but when dealing with the topic of the Nephilim we are by no means talking about elongated years and larger brows stronger bodies and wisdom teeth that fit perfect like a glove the extremely long years resting on the large brow of the forehead nor are we fiddling around with old monkey bones the truth however is that there are a lot of human-like bones on this planet which can very easily even to trained experts blur the lines between was it human or was it something else now there are a lot of tribes have done varieties of things their bodies to achieve a number of different effects including the binding of the skull to produce this elongated shape on the back of the head there are some significant differences however between even the best of clearly modified skulls like this skull on the screen here and skulls that appear significantly larger and much more naturally formed than that like this actual elongated skull being compared against the bust of either Nefertiti or Akhenaten's daughter leading many to ask if these tribesmen originally began binding babies heads in an attempt to copy something that was perhaps a whole lot larger in scope like this actual skull found in Peru some of these are just absolutely massive there are hundreds and hundreds of them wildly massive including children that already have the features one of the first red flags that you're dealing with something that is incredibly strange is that the actual head volume of the elongated skull is at least 25 larger in its head volume than a regular human or even an old human skull these are in fact quite different but it's not just that they absolutely have to be enormously massive there's another difference on just the skulls themselves which is even more puzzling than that every human skull on every single human being should have these two plates in the back of the skull that are clearly divided between the two of them by this crease running towards the back of the head this elongated skull however is not like that with the crease and the two plates in the back this skull has one long crease very defined here a crease coming back this way and one very large skull cap binding a little baby's head should most certainly not change the genetic bone structure but it's not just elongated heads we're talking about we're also talking about giants like this Thailand image holding the enormous sword and the two fangs or tusks coming out of the mouth now I do believe that's a Babylonian Ishtar right there depicted as a circular disc which these three gentlemen are bringing before this very large character Babylon particularly ancient Babylon plays perhaps a critical role in all this just second down from Babylon would be Egypt after the Hebrews were in the wilderness during the time of the tabernacle and about to enter the promised land in numbers 13 33 it says this and there we saw the giants the Nephilim the sons of Anak who were of the giants and we were in our own sight as grasshoppers before them now there are some tribes where god told the Hebrews just conquer the people and then there are other tribes where god specified wipe them all out as if there's some type of a gene pool problem as is in the case of the Canaanites the Gargathites the Ammonites all of which are listed as giants and then you've got other types of tribes like for example the Amalekites the 1st paragraph means people the second part of the malachite it's an ancient word in semitic languages that means vampire-like demons these Amalekites were not human and a lot of people believe that this is where the vampire legends came from in Romania and I'm sure the Israelites will do this by looking at them I mean if they're if the fights are considered a vampire like demon you know I'm sure they probably have the features Deuteronomy 3:11 only king egg of Bashan the giant was left remaining of the Gargathites the Ammonites or so the Hebrews believed but the truth is giants have been reported in archaeological finds all across the globe particularly in the United States which is what most every one of these news articles right here going down the screen are about many of them from the New York Times some bones are still available however like this actual image of a jawbone recovered from a giant skeleton in Nevada that's being compared to a human jawbone on the screen how large do you think that skeleton actually was or the Indian legend of the red-headed giants interesting about Indian legends the symbol of the how is often said to ensure that the other guy does not have six fingers or the famous serpent mounds in Ohio where in the 1800s it's reported that skeletons of enormous giants were found around this site that has the shape of an enormous serpent that they mysteriously build which can only truly be seen well from the air following the 1950s and the defeat of Nazi Germany and eugenics same time period that Americans begin pumping out movies about space invaders and men coming from other planets and deeply religious views of the occult such as those of Blavatsky instrumental in the occult beliefs of Adolf Hitler himself sort of take a sidestep into the shadows articles such as these begin to dry up and disappear in roughly about the 1950s and the skeletons seem to vanish many make the strong case that the bone structures disagree with the political formulation of the theory of evolution whereas that may be true there are others who would argue that it's somewhat deeper than that speaking of a cult if I shift my attention over in the direction of ancient Egypt the place that occasionally had kings with very unusual skulls like this actual imagery here done using the skull of the 18th dynasty king Akhenaten without any digital effects on it this piece of artwork is female believed by many to be Cenote's daughter here is his son the child king in this x-ray on the screen here the very infamous king Tut who also had this rather his family had very unique features long head in all of the drawings of himself like this actual drawing of Cenote notice the crown is very elongated and the strange shape of the body and this is the wife Nefertiti carved in stone this king moved the most powerful palace in all of Egypt to rule over an area called the Marna to take the pentacle of power and throne of the empire from Thebes and abides and the land of the old gods all the way up here to a newly prospering place called Amarna which is directly across the Red Sea from cyanide curious thing about the ruins of this particular dig site it has a reported 365 outdoor altars the practice of worship of one god a mesmerizing place stretching into the horizon and it's an entirely well-drawn community all three of which are not Egyptian practices they're Hebrew practices one thing that Akhenaten and his son king Tut both proved is that even god kings can die both were killed with remarkably similar bashes in their long heads I personally think that the visor I did it in cahoots with the head military general Ramsey's great grandfather of Ramses the great but I wasn't there and the statute of limitations has run out Akhenaten shown here with the serpent coming out of his forehead and his son Tut were the final kings of the 18th dynasty later giving rise to the 19th dynasty king Ramses the great immortalized in the statue here who many believe was the pharaoh at the time of the exodus men pitta depicted here standing next to raw with the disc encapsulated by the serpent mimpt was the next king to take the throne of Egypt after Ramses he was also the 13th son of Ramses the great on his victory steel depicted right here makes a strange statement the people of Israel is laid waste their crops are not I have no idea what that means just because your dad Ramsey's hands you an empire missing at least half of its army and all of its slaves you can't go getting all bent out of shape about that but if I am too hot way backwards in time that 200 fallen angels recorded as having come in prior to the flood which is really what's being referred to when you hear terms like mystery religion notice the star inside of the golden jewel-covered crescent covered in the book of Enoch alluded to in the book of Genesis as well as many parts of both the old and new testament as well as ancient texts and hieroglyphs that we'll look at and writings all across the ancient world being recorded in large scale prior to the flood and then in a smaller trickle of a scale following the flood there are at least 277 flood stories from cultures stretching every conceivable part of the globe some of them bringing you right to the front doorstep of that flood like the epic of Gilgamesh from 2700 to 2900 BC every mountain range on earth contains fish fossils marine life and even sea shells found on top of Mount Everest in the Himalayas extending to include mass beached whale graveyards turning up in the middle of deserts like this classic example here of the mass whale graveyard in Chile the most arid desert in the world and here's another whale dig site from the other side of the globe in the sands of Egypt look at the size of that whale buried in that desert there plant and animals are found buried and fossilized in every single layer and strata of the top layers of the earth creatures of every possible kind of animal that we see every day are found mixed in underneath the earth along with mammoth size creatures which don't seem to be around anymore and these animals of every genre and flavor are often found in mass graveyards like this actual dinosaur graveyard seen on the screen here as if the animals were hurting and whatever happened fast hit all at once and was unexpected strangely when dealing with strata it is sifted by sediments exactly as one would expect there were a lot of water pumping around on the surface of the ground one of the enormous challenges of dating anything is that you have to know what the pre-existing conditions were for example this dragonfly fossilized on the screen here has a two and a half foot long wingspan dragonflies take in perfectly the amount of oxygen that they need to fly if one were to assume that atmospheric conditions oxygen levels and carbon levels in the past were like this when they were actually way up here like this that would indeed pump out numbers that were very large all across the board this dragonfly on the screen could not lift up off the ground and fly today we find extremely high oxygen levels in little bitty air bubbles trapped in ancient tree sap even buried in common things that we might not think about look at the size of this modern day elephant in comparison to this giant animal here brontosaurus much of this stuff requires an entirely different and much more lush environment this elephant is about the size in girth as the base of the neck of this animal brontosaurus would have a terribly difficult time lifting its body today and that is but one tiny example of an Everest-sized mountain of thousands the most common method of dating in this present day is using fossils to date geological layers and using geological layers to date fossils or some would call this circular reasoning one thing that I find fascinating not only are there mass burials of animals underground but their mass burials of trees going all sorts of different directions some of them interestingly enough going vertical what this means is that you would have trees that would have had to have been standing up for millions of years while the layers of strata form around the tree no one really knows how many of these there actually are buried all over the place underneath the ground this is believed to be the oldest living tree on earth its name is Methuselah and its age is believed to be 4840 years old give or take which is interesting because if you're using the Septuagint or the Masoretic text and even using Gilgamesh as well as the Sumerian kings list as a reference point you're going to come up with a flood date a pinch more than 3000 BC maybe a few hundred years more and old Methuselah would have been born just a little bit afterwards I wasn't there but I know this that enormous whales really should not be turning up in deserts and thousands and thousands and thousands of seashells should not be backpacking through the Himalayas trees don't generally stand up for tens or hundreds of millions of years while layers of sediments build up around them I'm thinking that maybe a real big flood did it occasionally I'll hear commentators state that ancient India is tens and tens sometimes even hundreds of thousands of years old and I've tried to chase the rabbit trails on what they mean by that it's not just India you'll find this pulling dates out of thin blue sky particularly in media stuff a lot I can't find what they're referencing the empire of India began following the death of Alexander the Great in 323 by you begin to see the rise of the first empire of India the Mauryan dynasty going back even further into the far east the rise of the first dynasty of ancient China the Jin dynasty its inception at 2000 BC bringing us full circle to our first empires which would rise right down here in Mesopotamia where Babylon would become in the ancient city of ancient Uruk where Gilgamesh ruled land of the star which is rested inside of the crescent Babylon and Egypt the two opening players of occult empires right after the flood and then dropping down right over here following alongside the Nile river banks where Egypt would become and where step pyramids and the first attempts at actual pyramids would begin to rise under the pharaohs in the third dynasty of Egypt about 2600 BC land of the eye of Horus and disc between the horns of the most ancient Hathor both stretches of land dropping down along the fertile land the so-called cradle of civilization where little bitty settlements would begin to take shape with your first tiny fortified cities like Uruk in roughly 2900 to 3000 BC coincidentally both newly developing locations dropping down from right up here in the same area where the boat that saved all mankind is said to have landed so those 200 angels covered by Enoch prior to the flood does not represent all of the fallen angels that there are it represents a small portion of the total number of fallen angels the ones which made entrance to this place came in and interbred with human beings this created all sorts of little uglies and unfriendlier including the giants is also indications in the text that this wasn't necessarily voluntary was some of your oldest pages and little bitty scribbles on earth including Enoch in full detail are telling you is that before that flood something unfriendly made entrance to this place and was genetically breeding itself creating its own offspring turning mankind into a blood-bathed circus of its own unimaginable and twisted design spreading like a virus generation after generation after generation for more than a thousand years until the flood came along wiping the slate clean taking everything back down to zero but then afterwards another little bitty door opened and perhaps what was in the past might slowly creep its way back in for a final show it's my extremely strong opinion that the bulk of the hundreds of truly strange bones and enormous skulls unlike man in this video came after the ancient flood Nephilim were on the earth in those days and also afterward Genesis 6:4 breeding generations look at the scope of the size of this child's head and then breeding even more generations the size of the eye sockets are enormous moving up this large skull and then dropping down to breed some more generations and here's another little baby one and then breeding even more than that and look at the eye sockets in comparison to the size of the skull atop that tiny skeleton Enoch 7-3 and when men could no longer sustain them the giants turned against them and began to devour mankind it really is absolutely amazing it's almost impossible to believe that what you're looking at really is real this one commonly gets called the royal redhead Brian Forrester as well as his team in Peru for making the footage as well as the elongated skulls seen in this video available that is one strange head Enoch continues and they begin to sin against the birds and the beasts and the reptiles and the fish I have absolutely no idea exactly what that means but it doesn't sound good and to devour one another's flesh and drink the very blood it is curious that whether in a biological or a spiritual sense that is equally as deep if not deeper than even the mysterious thing that we call consciousness which seems in a very real way to plug us in to reality at all there's always something uniquely special about the 14 blood heard it a million times the life of all flesh is in the blood the real word is it is important to note that after death the blood is no longer usable as if it's lost something every living organism on this planet is constructed of 3D digital coding like zip files pure data zero junk code in every single strand tip for tail line for line which opens up click by click to become a living biological organism all of it fitting together like a perfect glove and deeper inside the genome the framework of pure biological software and precision operating system file folders containing actual body plans digital instructions coordinating every strand every cell every little bitty part pulling the molecular fabric of every piece together to create a biological masterpiece literally written birthed into reality itself from scratch and seemingly plugged in to neurologically and consciously control every single system of the entire biological masterpiece it's not just consciousness the intangible controlling the tangible which is a paradox the living blueprint for what you call you is alive in every single drop of your blood one could quite easily come to believe that there's something a lot larger in scope going on here it does say in Genesis 1:26 that God himself created mankind in his own image and likeness it's a powerful statement when you're dealing with the ancient past or things which may even boggle the minds of trained physicians let no detail no matter how seemingly trite slip through the fingertips to truly understand Babylon the time periods lasting to this modern age the more recent past from which these skulls likely come one could easily make an extremely strong case that we are merely infants running loose in very short-term little bodies biological machines through which we peer out consciously into this thing that we call the material world built and constructed right out of thin air by digital coding light years more sophisticated in each and every single strand than all of the computer software made by man combined all the way back to the very first computer what the pages of Enoch are saying as well as the Hebrew texts and cultures all across this globe is that something has tried to plug itself in and insert itself into all of that Enoch is not just talking about a set of very dark fallen beings and producing their own hybrid children it goes a lot deeper than that what he's telling you is that these fallen angels which produced the Nephilim neither completely angel or completely human but something in between so what he's literally saying is when they die their souls come out from the race of giants that came from this union gave way to a brood of evil spirits and those are the bowel spirits of the earth the demons the Nephilim die they become or get added to the number of demons beings which later cultures would call the underworld gods the shadow creatures from all of the ages of history things and creatures that can possibly bleed through from a realm that might be just as close as the air between your fingertips now it is always eggs and semen that things like this are after right... summonsed notice the little baby down there in the image there's a big part of me that thinks that thing there might not ultimately want to be friends almost like whatever it is it's close enough it can see you Enoch used the term the watchers but in terms of evil the deeper darker more twisted in macabre the better and the higher the place of the carnage these aren't fallen angels if he casts them out the fallen angels can go they can go to the high places but these aren't fallen angels these are demons these are demons these are Rafael's these are dead museums don't forget that I brought up the high places sure is a lot of red way up there in this drawing the more vicious and brutal the more bloody the yet venomous terrifying and precise the ceremony as if intoxicating things that dwell in the darkness one of the most respected names in the field of ufology his opinion shared by notable others such as Jay Allen Henpeck was none other than Dr. Jacques Vallee instrumental in Steven Spielberg's close encounters of the third kind commonly stated his belief that the UFO phenomenon was in fact demonic human beings are under the control of a strange force that bends them in absurd ways forcing them to play a role in a bizarre game of deception was Alister Crowley a self-proclaimed black magician at the top of a great many of the most predominant secret societies to give the first drawing during the 20th century of one of these large-headed entities a character that Crowley claimed stepped through into physical reality this entity would ultimately become what Crowley would describe as a spiritual guide to him after an extensive battery of very intense black magic rituals you may find some similarities between Crowley's drawing and thousands if not tens of thousands of other such entities drawn by people from every walk of life all around the globe Crowley is quoted as stating today they call them angels and demons tomorrow they'll call them something else the UFO phenomenon simply does not behave like extraterrestrial visitors it actually molds itself in order to fit a given culture John Anker Berg John D the head intelligence officer under Queen Elizabeth in the 1500s he would do the deepest of inner lair occult rituals popularizing such ideas as the crystal ball alchemy and the philosopher's stone these long hours of ritual occult on behalf of the empire of England were done with fellow black magician Edward Kelly would ultimately leap to his death from a castle tower window John D however would go on to catalog extensive lists meticulously detailing out a vast array of entities which he claimed not only could communicate but could also physically step right through into the material world itself though the public position and statement of the empire was that Dee was communicating with angels Dee's diary discovered following his death told a different story recording that the entities were becoming more and more evil notice the serpents stating more and more emphatically these things are lying to me they're not angels they're demons UFO and knots and the demons of past days are probably identical Dr. Pierre Goren in looking at accounts of claimed aliens all roads seem to lead to the occult more specifically either Egyptian or Babylonian Ephesians 6:12 for we wrestle not against flesh and blood the claimed mystery religions themselves but against principalities powers rulers of darkness whether you're talking about something that just appears in the skies spiritual wickedness in high places which really does beg the question where is it when you don't see it one theory which can no longer be taken very seriously is that UFOs are interstellar spaceships with Sir Arthur C. Clarke or physically step through into this reality your ancient texts are taking you at least 10 steps further down the rabbit hole than that I have yet to meet one person who has come out of the occult that does not have in some cases terrifying and extremely tangible and real accounts to give I also find it particularly interesting when I've gotten to sit down with people who have had life after death experiences most especially if they were legally dead for any number of minutes and have actual medical records hell or ancient shield whether it be from someone in the occult or someone from an after death experience some strikingly eerie similarities these bland sort of expressionless pull you in type characters was sort of varying degrees of sinister evilness scribed almost like a diminished alternate version of earth that the person steps as if the ground level is being described as lower or different or falls right inside of with things that literally grab hold and herd the people into actual pit-like cages wherein at that point the descriptions of the creatures get even worse things much more disturbing and twisted than what may channel in to be portrayed as physical artwork and representations of something through the imaginations and the minds of men Ephesians 2:2 in which you used to live when you followed the ways of this world what fascinates me is when people look up and they describe and the ruler of the kingdom of the air like these sky city type of apparatuses is a spirit who is now at work in the sons of disobedience sort of hover in a murky or black dark scarred horizon whether in personal accounts or even in Enoch you get these hints of things that are in the air and things that are that are moving but diving below where the people are quickly snatched and drugged to the side by the apparent welcoming teams they'll talk about a lot of serpents ranging from enormous creatures to these more or less human size things often with man-like or human-like features similar to the wisdom serpents or serpent gods found in every single major ancient culture with uncanny similarities look at that big old serpent crawling inside of the crescent-shaped moon between the two Babylonian Ishtar stars I do believe you're going to find the serpents like the one these three fine fellas are praying to in nearly every belief and religion on earth the serpents no matter what size or shape they're described as just like any of the other characters within the place always had this ancient old one yet vicious and precise kind of highly intelligent twist it's also noteworthy to point out the similarities historically of bones or warped protrusion like horns is in this recreation of Egyptian artwork notice the extra set of horns on top is empty whereas in this rendering between the horns you've got this little disc resting on top an environment described at the core of its beating heart decrepit almost with this vibe of mechanical madness combined with living dead organism of tentacles and fangs what some might have been calling the second heaven the said diminished realm well beneath heaven and decrepit much more than the earth littered with sophisticated type things in its skies where the fallen angel lucifer himself is said to rule for a short spans almost like hitting the show code key the virus side of reality and cavernous needing a breath and a drop of water flames probably the most terrifying part of all of it is that the things there wanted you there in their clutches for some reason it's a prison that collects things that no one will ever come to help I'm not going to physically or personally go in to check any of that out I'm willing to take other people's word for it was Jesus Christ who described heaven as a place full of many mansions and likened hell to this actual place here Gehenna outside of Jerusalem where the trash was burned he was giving this analogy to common men to shepherders couched in a way that they could understand it as if the human body itself is nothing more than a shell a vessel a confining temporal instrument binding one to a specific location in both time and space of those who have tried to describe heaven though there are so many from every possible age range background and culture Enoch's pre-flood account is extremely precise people commonly talk about this unusual event called the rapture in the bible there are technically seven of them by my count Enoch is the first one on that list and he is the 7th from Adam I wonder if that has a meaning he stumbles for words at least a dozen times in his document stating to you I wish I could describe what I'm looking at and then afterwards talking about this place as if it doesn't even feel real anymore now to understand these things called Nephilim or the origins of physical evil important to recognize the entire scope but perhaps before taking a critical look at that pre-flood world of genesis or the kings with enormous life spans before the worldwide flood in the Sumerian kings list or analyzing the pages of Enoch great grandfather of Noah I want you to notice the Greek titan creatures park god part man in this image with his arms like a crescent holding the large disk in the middle same as what Gilgamesh claimed he was in the epoch of Gilgamesh the oldest written epic on the face of the planet earth the titans the sons of Saturn or sons of Satan and this isn't just Babylon or ancient Samaria the place of the Anunnaki the biblical sons of Anak kings and rulers of ages past reaching out their hands to summons the deepest regions of darkness in an effort to beckon things that bite the very hand that feeds into this place the sacrifice of little children deeply seated derangement shedding of innocent blood to Moloch or Baal working darkness into a frenzy playing the drums louder to drowned out the screams almost like a virus reaching out to grab its own desires through an extremely naive host to mass ritualistic human sacrifice notice up here above that the serpent is waiting it's almost as if the idea is that they're feeding something at the moment his eyes roll close that there's something on the other side waiting for him to come through notice how the serpent is used as encapsulation as if to define ownership it says something really fascinating in genesis 3:15 right after the eating of the fruit and the serpent in the garden it says I will put anomaly between you the serpent and the woman the serpent is coming out from the forehead the place where the 3rd eye or the mind's eye would be placed the eye of Horus or the all-seeing eye floating mysteriously above the pyramid of bricks built by men as a side note it is curious how strikingly similar the eye of Horus looks in comparison to a human penal gland inside the brain and dimensionally peering into this world through the glass darkly and of course the Inca with the symbol of this little bitty owl sort of peering through and between your offspring the seed of the serpent and her offspring he shall bruise your head and you shall bruise his heel now take a good look at these symbols that look like little horns with a circle inside them on top of the head of these two serpents here's an enormous version of the same symbol you're going to find quite a lot of these in ancient Egypt perhaps quite often on the head of an Egyptian goddess and there's the little serpent but it doesn't always have to be represented like that for example this golden cow's head here see here even the cows got a little serpent with the two ears or horns that makes sort of a cradle stars always representing angels inside of it with the sun shining light out from behind the ears inside of the cradle but the sun also sort of looks like it makes an eye shaped appearance going around it or a crescent moon with a star now when you're talking about stars like this large representation of a Babylonian Ishtar sitting couched inside of its crescent the stars when used in an ancient text are extremely often symbolism for angels or perhaps even a very particular fallen angel the answer goes all the way back to the temple of Hathor to the mega complex of Dendera Hathor goes all the way back to king Narmer himself in dynasty zero that's king Narmer right there from the normal palette found in the temple of Horus notice up here the long crown on the head of the king and at the top of the palate of the first king of Egypt the first symbol of the face of Hathor a literal temple for storing the history all the way back to the inception of ancient Egypt itself with the symbol of Hathor crowned atop the serpent's heads the Egyptians believed that the kingship of all Egypt started with one named Osiris a dead man who would be brought back to life by ISIS Osiris would be infilled and reanimated by the spirit of an underworld god notice the wings on the goddess and then up over here the little horns with the disc in the center the flesh of the reanimated Osiris is generally a murky bluish green this union of a resurrected dead man and a winged creature would give birth to what they called Horus notice the disc in this image no longer is encapsulated with horns but instead is simply wrapped with a serpent this shape is not 2 horns it's the shape of a woman's womb which is why it's on the head of a fertility goddess and the solar disk or sun disk in the center is just like the star was for the Babylonians and the sun in their hieroglyphs is owned by the serpent the symbol for the ruler of the air inside the crescent the birth canal or the moon being represented in the feminine in which the sun symbolically has rested inside of and producing Horus the new little eye that is peering through and watching notice down here the serpent again with the little disc on its head in fact at the entrance to the temple of Hathor where this enormous symbol is there are actually 17 little bitty serpents underneath that humongous symbol it's like a little identifier this plus this equals this it's like a post-it note for the ancient beast popped right on top of their heads move out of the way we're making underworld gods here all right they're a bunch of demons and of course serpents in every possible and spiritual sense whatever may have been the exact details of what the Egyptians were trying so dearly to express the underworld gods are not being displayed as just basic common day-to-day knowledge on their walls but more than that the focal point of the entire empire it was an oppressive place here's a character from the walls of Egypt that you may recognize or perhaps you're more familiar with his updated version the star in the middle of the two horns even got two serpents down here coming out the goat of Mendez this text is from the Egyptians most treasured document the book of the dead chapter 175 where autumn would later combine with autumn raw here enlisted as the high supreme god states this then I will be what will remain just I and a sore when I will have changed myself back into the old serpent who knew no man and saw no god the pain poverty and hardship common people does seem to follow that star Cambodia you have the Naga serpent kings in Hindu Vishnu sleeps in the cosmos nirvana with the serpents perhaps king Solomon was right it's nothing new under the sun most all ancient cultures particularly Babylon and ancient Egypt believed that their gods which could be physically summoned to manifest were in the underworld when you hear luciferins and the cultists throughout every age talking about the ability to summons little spookiest things that most certainly do not have your best interest at heart or entities very tangible things not only does it hate you it wishes that it could be you it's my extremely strong opinion that they are not making that up this was believed to be a dimension running parallel side by side with the earth and equally as real a place full of hate anger bondage terror total lack and despair place where mankind is herded up and cast to the fangs of a vast array of frightening things but in the very halls of pentacles of power throughout the ages of earth men from nearly every age of empire both great to small in pursuit of mankind's age-old hang-ups lust greed power or the really big one that goes all the way back to the serpent and the garden itself ye shall become as gods softly whispered lies almost like the whole thing is a test trinkets in exchange for everything now if we go back just a pinch before the first step pyramid in Egypt under de jossier I hop back over here to the land of Samaria later Babylon to the little tiny settlement of uric called by many the oldest city in the world and by some the rising new York city of the ancient world is just outside ancient Europe where nimrod the first king the one recorded is having been in defiance to the lord god one of the great grandsons of Noah drawn here deified in this 4,000 year old recreation of an artifact and artwork from ancient Nineveh or in the Sumerian writings the legend of in marker the king of uric who actually built the great tower that has come to be known in history as the tower of babel the name meant gate of the god you can view the tower of babel like one enormous mega invocation ritual they're recorded as inviting something from the darkness to step up from its lair was at that point that they described something sort of human-like entered 2nd Corinthians 11:14 even Satan himself masquerades as an angel of light the Sumerians called it the inky as seen on this actual inscription he's making entrance through this little doorway with these lines around it surrounded by these two characters with heads that look something like this and the inky was called the lord of earth the giver of knowledge or the morning star sometimes the word... or the symbolism like these little wiggly lines here gets translated as waters it's not quite correct the word of zoo means abyss which is where the inky being summonsed here is coming 4th out of this stretching scape of land right here is believed to be the remains and ruins of the tower of babel the place where in either the Sumerian texts or the biblical texts the tongues were confused and the people began to fan out or the ancient ziggurat of just 12 kilometers outside of er and of course the very word babble today means confusion if you take all of your pages and hours of history you're dealing with a tale of two cities Israel and Babylon spiritual light or conversely spiritual darkness everything in this place has a lower level meaning and a higher level meaning after the Hebrews left Egypt the land of Osiris raw in the eye of Horus and entered Sinai following the plagues of Egypt and the parting of the red sea the ark of the covenant and the mercy seat between the wings of the two arch angels placing the ark inside the holy of holies at the very center of the temple where the high priest would go in once a year and he would sprinkle the blood of atonement on the mercy seat of the ark of the covenant speaking of power in the blood this 2,000 years before yeshiva was born before Jesus was born and crucified when you say god's sacred name when the high priest was sprinkling blood on the ark of the covenant and saying god's holy sacred name sprinkling blood on the ark he would be saying Yahweh involved and the word picture is behold once a year in the center of the tabernacle in the heart that's the unspeakable name of god by the way in the holy of holies while putting the blood on the ark of the covenant the high priest sprinkling the blood once a year would be saying behold the hand behold the nail surrounded by the encampment of all of the Israelite tribes god gave some very tedious instructions on the setup of this camp in the wilderness with the Levite priests dead in the center in fact itemizing out what the exact population numbers were of each of the tribes that were camping sometimes the most curious things are buried right in plain sight I've saved some time for you this is what exactly that camp would have looked like does the shape of that precisely calculated out layout look familiar this image here is precisely what the shape of the Israelite camp would have looked like of course the Levites and the tabernacle itself were right in the center the heart right there and deeper inside that middle in the heart of the holiest of holies where the priest would stand before the mercy seat itself and say the unspeakable name of god behold the hand behold the nail this is more than 1,500 years before Jesus Christ was a moving cross out there on the desert floor that would have been so mesmerizing to have seen looking down with all the little campfires going from the sky at night let's see if we can take that a step deeper curiously if you take the names from Adam all the way down to Noah in the book of genesis and you look at the root meaning of those names this is what it reads man appointed mortal sorrow the blessed god shall come down teaching his death shall bring the despairing rest and comfort you'd have a terrible time convincing me that some Hebrew scribes concocted that in the genesis text nonetheless let's go deeper than that pre-flood book of Enoch he goes further than just fallen angels and hybrid offspring Enoch is redundantly prophesying the coming of this son of man laying out that at a time in the future not only will what has been done be undone but further that through his name they shall be saved there are at least 365 extremely specific prophecies of the coming of that child and the sacrifice of a savior the Passover began before the final plague in Egypt before the Israelite slaves marched out of the largest empire on earth fulfilling every single rule of a Passover sacrifice no less and before the final plague of Egypt they were to put the blood of the Passover lamb on their doorpost curious what meanings can be found in things when you're willing to scratch one curious detail the symbol of the... during any Canaanite or pre-Canaanite time period would have looked something like this it is true that the ancient toff meaning sign or mark perhaps covenant looks something exactly like this crucifixion would not even become a practice until five ages of empires later under the romans it is interesting that the blood would be saving their first-born sons a god would be giving up his in fact even done on Passover day while the kings of earth were throwing babies onto open fire pits and flames sparing no expense to build the grandest of towers and ziggurats to feed darkness their subjects lives to satisfy and appease the unending thirst of their little bitty otherworldly underworld gods something tells me that in a minute here the underworld gods and the shadow people are going to have a role to play in all this before we get to the end what greater love could one have than to lay down their life for their friends here's the empty tomb where Jesus was for 3 days that 365 specific prophecies about Jesus Christ by no means includes the fabric of patterns there are at least 4 times that many for the second coming the hours when all the old score cards get tallied up then there are for the first restoration in the entrance and return of the king but out of all of those prophecies there's only one other person other than Enoch who used this term son of man that would have been Daniel who survived the lion's den well in the very heart of Babylon no less it's astounding how these things work out was Daniel who interpreted the king of Babylon nebuchadnezzar's dream of the 5 empires leading to the end including nebuchadnezzar's own and not including the two before it that makes a total of 7 I wonder if that means anything but an angel would appear in the later years of Daniel's life more specifically Gabriel the same angel that came to Mary prior to the birth of Jesus Christ as well as believe to be an angel at the tomb after the resurrection and not only give him a tit for tat sentence by sentence line for line walkthrough of coming history and we know that none of that precision was done after the fact because the Septuagint which included Daniel was put together under... during the 3rd century BC as is seen in Daniel 11 beginning with the kings of the north and the kings of the south the Seleucid and Ptolemaic empires predicting even the unlikely rise of the little-known underdog which would later come to be known as the empire of Rome those are some really impressive guesses but by far the most impressive of the entire bunch is that Daniel would predict the exact day and date that Jesus Christ would enter the front gate of Jerusalem on the back of a donkey fulfilling Zachariah 9:9 that the people rejoice as the king cometh on the back of a foul donkey this would be the tenth of Nissan or more precisely April 6th 32 AD. 4 days before the crucifixion Daniel is giving you the exact starting point Daniel 9:25 states know and understand this from the time that the word goes out to restore and rebuild Jerusalem until the anointed one the king comes the date that a Persian king gave the decree of art Xerxes on march 14th 445 BC to restore and rebuild Jerusalem after the Persians had defeated Babylon in exactly the way by exactly the guy Cyrus that Isaiah had predicted 200 years in advance countdown leading to the precise day and writing this more than 500 years in advance it brings new meaning to when Jesus Christ told the pharisees you think that in those scriptures you have eternal life but it's those very pages that speak of me because of the mass reports of healings and blind eyes open on many occasions the masses had wanted to make him king but he never allowed them to praise him and declare him out as king until one very particular day that Daniel had given the math for more than 500 years in advance arriving at the front gate of Jerusalem the religious leaders the pharisees told Jesus you have to shut these people up this is heresy Jesus replied to the pharisees if I were to silence these people indeed I tell you even the rocks of this place would cry out if you do the math from the decree of art Xerxes to the triumphant entry this point here 69 times 7 times 360 using the identical calendar system of the ancient world most especially Babylon making provision for the 24 day difference between march 14th and April 6th as well as your 116 days added in for leap years you're going to come up to exactly 173,880 days on the money Daniel's margin of error more than 500 years beforehand from that angel's lips was precisely zero but if I hop backwards much before Daniel before even the young king David stamped into the pages of history for the highly unusual miraculous defeat of a 6-fingered giant named goliath but going back past even David the one often called a man after god's own heart beyond the days in the wilderness then even the time in Egypt back to our first little starting gay cultures down here in Egypt and over here in Samaria the place of ancient uric where Gilgamesh depicted here is statue ruled right here to the land and area of er now that is a giant holding a lion right where Abraham the father of all the future children of Israel was living many believe that Abraham could see the base of the tower of babel while growing up and then it begins a little something like this get thee out of thy country and from thy kindred and from thy father's house unto a land that I will show unto thee Abraham would ultimately travel over here to exactly where modern-day Jerusalem is and I will make of thee a great nation and I will bless thee and make thy name great and thou shalt be a blessing and I will bless them that bless thee and curse them that curse thee that's a very big promise one night he woke up with hot sweats and horrors that the lord had shown him that his descendants would be slaves in a foreign land for 400 years but that god himself said that he would judge that nation and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed genesis 12 1-3 what those pages are telling you is that the Hebrews Israel was the delivery system for the savior of all mankind leading full circle to the most well-known passage in the whole masquerade of particles that makes up the planet earth for god so loved the world that he gave his one and only son that whosoever believeth in him shall not perish but have everlasting and eternal life and every single possible thing short of the kitchen sink tried to stand in the way of that what those pages are saying all of them is that you no matter who you are on the other side of the screen were born above even the angels someone asked me the other day how I truly thought that the entire universe was held together I was stumped by the question here's my answer it's love totally undeserved love never listen to snakes because they're snakes you were born to be free in every possible sense in both this life and the next it's my extremely strong opinion that the shadow people are not your friends go on your own journey to ask these very same questions your life is worth that oh before I forget Jesus did say another thing to his disciples in Matthew 24 says so it was in the days of Noah so also shall it be in the day of the return of the son of man one can only wonder what exactly that might mean it is true that the grand finale of any fireworks show is always at the end I'm trey smith and I hope you enjoyed the video Nephilim: TRUE STORY of Satan, Fallen Angels, Giants, Aliens, Hybrids, Elongated Skulls & Nephilim

While not necessarily established work of the major religions The Book of Enoch is certainly an interesting read the text itself dates to 300 BC and is noted as being more of an ancient Jewish text but us maintain a place in some modern Christian and Jewish traditions Enoch himself which the book is named after is referenced in the book of Genesis and his detail as being an ancestor of Noah one of the most prominent figures in the Book of Enoch are the Watchers angelic being is described as being both the sons of God and the sons of heaven in Chapter 7 many believe that the watchers refer to as the Grigori in Enoch 2 were angels who watched over the human race and would serve as earthly guides for their very first humans they were tasked with the observing of human development but were restricted from interfering with mankind regardless of how compelled they felt to do so Enoch tells us in Chapter 7 the human men and women had multiplied and that the daughters of man were beautiful and elegant it's understood that their beauty was so great that they caught the attention of the watchers these sons of God if you will the watchers conversed amongst each other in this chapter and decided to take the women for themselves impregnating them with their seed thus going against the intended purpose of watching and directly interfering with the life of mankind the leader of these angels known as some java sometimes pronounced samaya tells the watchers that they should reconsider their choice and that it would be him who suffered for such a crime against God however the other angels wear him down and tell him that together they will face the punishment and they will each accept responsibility for any repercussions it's noted in total that there were 200 of them and together they descended upon earth to take the women as their wives the Book of Enoch even names the prefix of the Watchers here each of whom would teach the mortal woman sorcery in Conte scion's and the dividing of roots and trees what's implied here is that the Watchers divulged information about the heavens and life itself their God had not intended for a man to know and so by doing this the Watchers not only betrayed God by copulating with his creations but also by corrupting them with knowledge that was not meant for them the women then gave birth to the children of the Watchers and what they spawn are essentially a hybrid of Angel and human the Nephilim as they are sometimes referred to as there's some debate as to what the Nephilim are but when we look at Genesis 6:1 through 4 it tells us that the Nephilim were on the earth in those days and also after words when the sons of God which we might say are the Watchers went to the daughters of men and had children with them the Nephilim are also described as heroes of old and men of renown however in Enoch the spawn of the women are known as Giants and that these Giants began to consume all that man had built the Giants or Nephilim then began to kill men and when they were tired of that they began killing each other the journalist chaos we learn in Chapter 8 that entity known as Azazel who is presumed to be a watcher teaches man the use of swords knives and warfare much as the Watchers taught humankind the secrets of heaven incarnations and sorcery as they saw also teaches mankind the use of paint stones and dyes so that man can manipulate the world and alter it in 82 we learn that these acts by Azazel caused impiety to increase fornication multiplied and that these transgressions corrupted all of man's ways the rest of the chapter tells us that the other Watchers taught mankind astrology science astronomy and that with them presence men were destroyed and their Christ reached the heights of heaven in Chapter 9 Archangel Michael Gabriel Raphael and Uriel look down from heaven and realize what was going on earth in this chapter they go before God and seemed to pin most of the blame on Azazel saying you have seen what Azazel has done how he has taught every species of inquiry upon earth and has disclosed the world all the secret things which are done in the heavens they also blamed some... saying he has taught the mortals sorcery and then he and his watchers have copulated with the women creating ungodly Giants they ask God what he will have them do to bring restoration upon earth in Chapter 10 God then sends Uriel to seek the son of Lamech which is Noah and tells him to conceal himself to explain to him what is about to take place in that all of the earth shall perish in a flood and that everything which has come to be will be destroyed he tells Uriel to tell Noah how to escape the flood and how it is his seed that will remain in all of earth God then tells Archangel Raphael to bind Azazel by hand and foot and to cast him into the darkness by opening the desert which is in due Dale a region of the underworld he tells Raphael to throw upon him pointed stones and to cover him in the darkness so that as... will remain there forever devoid of all light on the great day of judgment God is set a task Raphael with casting Azazel into the fire God tells Archangel Gabriel to destroy the Nephilim the Giants or the offspring of the watchers by telling them against one another he intends for them to perish by mutual slaughter God finally tells Archangel Michael to confront the leader of the Watchers some.. and to tell him that he and his allies who had fornicated with the women that they are polluted and at their sons whether their own angelic sons or the sons they had fathered with the mortal women they will be slain before their eyes for seventy generations then after witnessing the butchering of their offspring they will be taken to the lower depths of Hell where they will meet fire and be locked away forever by chapter 12 we are told that Enoch was engaged by the Watchers and that they called him Enoch the scribe it appears that God tells Inuk to relay his message to the Watchers but they will never ever have peace as a result of what they have done there seems to be an inconsistency here because Archangel Michael would have no doubt already done this as God had asked him to do so in the previous chapter it could be that Enoch is told to do this so as to exemplify God's message in that the watchers are being told by both the Archangels who are above them and by the mortals who were beneath them by having Enoch tell them their fate it shows the Watchers that they are no longer above humankind in God's eyes for they are being told their fate by a man thus putting them on the same level and maybe even above them in Chapter 12 5 through 7 he stays then the Lord said to me Enoch scribe of righteousness go to the waters of heaven who have deserted the lofty sky and a holy everlasting station who have been polluted with women and have done as the sons of men do by taking to themselves wives and who have been greatly corrupted on earth that on the earth they shall never obtain peace and the mission of sin for they shall not rejoice in their offspring they shall behold the slaughter of their beloved shall lament for the destruction of their sons and shall petition forever but shall not obtain mercy and peace in chapter 13 it's interesting that Enoch only seems to confront Azazel the apparent main culprit in all of this despite the leader of the watch has been some... it's possible that while some jars are only sought to fornicate with the women and share some secrets of the heavens he did not share the malice that Azazel did in teaching men about warfare notice Azazel does not appear to take interest in the mortal women but seems only intent on teaching man about swords knives and the altering of the world which was already designed perfectly as God intended in chapter 13 4 through 5 Inuk states that he speaks to all of the watchers together and that they all became terrified and trembled he goes on to say that the Watchers begged him to give God their regrets and their repentance for what they had done because they themselves could no longer ascent to heaven nor bring themselves to look upon the skies out of disgrace so (.....) prays for them until he falls asleep only for him to have a dream and vision of punishment and he is told to reprove the watchers by telling them of what he saw once he awakens he approaches them and relays them of his dream reprimanding them for what they have done in chapter 14 Enoch explains that when he spoke he was speaking with the word and voice of God in this voice he tells them that they will not be granted forgiveness as they had requested and that it will never be allowed into heaven again and that they will be bound to earth for as long as the earth injurers never knowing of peace the fate of the Watchers though doesn't necessarily feel complete we understand that they were bound for 70 generations under the earth and will remain there until the day of judgment where they are to be cast away into the lowest deaths to burn in the fires by this logic some would therefore believe that the watchers are still there underground imprisoned at the bottom of the earth waiting to be cast into the fires of hell in the end times we actually get a glimpse of where the Watchers may have been banished to in Enoch chapter 21 where we see Enoch gets something of a personal tour of the heavens and other otherworldly areas in the universe in 21 he states and there I beheld neither tremendous workmanship of an exalted heaven nor of an established earth but a desolate spot prepared and terrific by... tells us that he beheld the operation of great fire blazing and glittering in the midst of which there was a division columns of fire struggled together to the end of the abyss and deep was their descent in 21 6 rock angel Uriel who accompanies Enoch through this terrible place asks him why are you alarmed and amazed at this terrific place at the sight of this place of suffering this he said is the prison of the Angels and here they are kept forever while the waters are never specifically mentioned here one can imagine that this would be the sort of place that God would keep those that had betrayed him in a place of suffering in the second book of Enoch we see a collection of stories there sees Enoch ascent through several layers of heaven but it is at the 5th heaven that in and discovers the Grigori a race of angels that were human in appearance their size greater than the greatest of giants but their faces with it an expression silent this layer of heaven was also the least magnificent out of all the layers that Enoch had seen thus far which he described as having no service it's understood that the Grigori in this text of the Book of Enoch - actually the same as the Watchers in the Book of Enoch one inner asks the angels who accompanied him through the heavens who the Grigori are to which the angels reply that they Grigori once led by a prince named Satan all and that they like the Watchers went down to earth against God's wishes took the women on earth and had their way with them and caused chaos with her offspring what's striking here is that their leader is not noted as being some... but instead Prince certain all this is not explored further but there are those that believe that based on the similarity of the name and the role in which certain all takes this is a form of Satan himself reasons that support this include that in chapter 29 of The Book of Enoch to Satan Oh is mentioned again long with his angels as being cast out from a great height similarities can be drawn between revelation 12:9 in the Bible where Satan is cast out of heaven and therefore great height as it reads Satan who deceives the whole world was cast to earth and his angels were cast out with him but furthermore in the same chapter it's understood the certain attempted to place his throne higher than the clouds above earth that he might become equal to God's power this reminds me of Isaiah in 14:13 where Isaiah appears to be addressing Satan quoting him as saying I will ascend to the heavens I will raise my throne above the stars of God of course you may also consider this to be coincidental and not exactly evidence for the linking of Satan all to Satan in any case Enoch proceeds to pray for the Grigori but is quick to understand they are damned and that God's contempt for them is absolute he is noted as intending for them to be buried underground for ever and ever Enoch also notes that at some point the Grigori break into song and that their voices carry up to the Lord in a pitiful fashion it shows us that the Grigori are now withered and broken that they can't even sing convincingly enough to warrant God's attention the fact that they try to sing at all might show us that they have remorse and sing out of desperation in the hope that God will free them from their bounds additionally you might also say that the lack of conviction in their voices is a sign of the disincentive that they are not sorry and are only appeasing to God so as to attain egress it goes without saying that the law around the Watchers is fascinating and helps to provide a compelling narrative despite being a non-canonical text the story despite being thousands of years old a stone with several themes of betrayal morality desire and ambition it helps to convey another perspective of how sin purged the world it also provides another layer as to why God might have destroyed the world with the flood so as to rid the Nephilim and to cleanse the land which had been corrupted by the Watchers it also gives us some more intriguing and profound characters to examine such as Serjias the leader of the watchers who understood his duty and intended to stick by it only to succumb to the peer pressure of his companions and surrender it also gives us as Axel the watcher who appears to take the most blame for the incident and shows us the extent of his wickedness that he sought to teach man about weapons and warfare in a time where was not needed we're also treated in this text to comprehend the power of the Archangels such as Gabriel who is sent to destroy the Nephilim and Raphael who directly opposes as Axel and defeats him in essence you might say that the first chapters of Enoch tease us with the concept of angels fighting angels and serves to show us the potency of evil that it can corrupt even those born out of goodness [The Watchers: The Angels Who Betrayed God \[Book of Enoch\] \(Angels & Demons Explained\)](#)

What is human history? It is a record of the victors, of power and purpose. Evolution, the agricultural revolution, and so on, most are at least vaguely familiar with these concepts. But what if it is not quite so simple? What if the stories of the ancients, tales of gods and angels, of giants and disasters, are more literal than they might seem upon first glance? Look closer, and an alternative history of humans may be revealed. One which totally upends conventional knowledge and the history of power. This is an alternative history which has been censored out of human understanding, mostly forgotten, or ignored. Until now. In early 1946, in the region now known as the West Bank, a group of Bedouin teenagers were tending to their sheep and goats near the ancient settlement of Qumran. To pass the time, monotonous as it was, they threw around the rocks they found littered across the rugged desert terrain. When one such rock was thrown into the dark expanse of a cave, the teenagers were surprised to hear a loud shattering noise echoing from within. Exploring, they found a collection of large clay jars, one of which had been broken. Though they did not know it at that moment, these teenagers had made a historic discovery. Inside the jars were a series of ancient scrolls. In the years that followed this discovery, archaeologists, historians, and treasure hunters would find additional scroll fragments in 10 other caves in the area, their composition forming some 800 to 900 manuscripts collectively known as the Dead Sea Scrolls. Among these manuscripts were large portions of a mysterious non-canonical religious text which had long been forgotten. It was called the Book of Enoch. In its entirety, The Book of Enoch is made up of five books, The Book of Watchers, Book of Parables, The Astronomical Book, The Dream Visions, and The Epistles of Enoch, containing some 100 chapters. These chapters tell the story of the 7th patriarch in the Book of Genesis, Enoch, the father of Methuselah and grandfather of Noah, the same Noah in the biblical story of Noah's Ark. Yet, this was not the biblical story of Noah's Ark. In fact, the Book of Enoch provides an entirely different recounting of the events leading up to the Great Flood of Noah's time, that is a completely different doctrinal history. It tells a story of the Watchers, explained in biblical terms to be fallen angels, sent to earth to watch over humans at some undefined and ancient point in time. Unfortunately, far from merely watching humans, these Watchers became infatuated by human women, and in short order, began to engage in depraved sexual acts with them. The Book of Enoch tells of the children born through this interbreeding between Watchers and humans, called the Nephilim. These Nephilim were as described, "giants and savages that endangered and pillaged humanity," or, said another way, "supernatural, man-eating giants." Angered with what the Watchers had done, those described as gods chained them in a subterranean prison deep within the earth. Enoch became the go-between gods and imprisoned Watchers. The Book describes Enoch's journeys between heaven and earth in his role as an intermediary, how he flew with the angels and saw the rivers and mountains and the very ends of the earth from above. Yet, despite Enoch's intervention, the gods decided the atrocity that the earth had become must be punished. Of course, the punishment would be a great flood. This flood would destroy the Nephilim and cement the Watchers in their prison. Beforehand, however, Enoch would be whisked away to heaven in a fiery chariot. Interestingly, the Book of Genesis, which tells of the Great Flood in Abrahamic traditions, references the Nephilim in Chapter 6, describing "heroes that were of old, warriors of renown." This is not the only place in biblical canon which the Nephilim appear. In Numbers 13:32-33, the Israelites visit a land inhabited by Nephilim, who are so large they make the Israelites look like grasshoppers. Of course, many things in the Bible are seen in modern times as allegorical, that is, more philosophical myth than historical record. There is archaeological evidence of a great flood in the earth's past, one, incidentally, also spoken about in countless religious and cultural traditions across the world. Had beings like Nephilim giants existed? Surely there would be similar evidence. What if there is? In our 30-minute documentary... about giants, we highlighted dozens of stories of enormous skeletons unearthed across North America, together with many newspapers' articles from the late 19th and early 20th century suggesting that ancient giants were indeed real and coexisted with early humans. This is not a phenomenon confined to the United States. Similarly, enormous skeletons have been found in the Amazon Rainforest, Africa, and elsewhere. In fact, stories of giants permeate human history and tradition. The famed explorer Marco Polo once wrote of a race of giants in Zanzibar who were "so strong they can carry as many as 4 ordinary men," while the people of modern-day Tangier, Morocco once claimed their city's founder was a giant named Antaeus. According to Irish myth, the so-called Giant's Causeway off the northeast coast of Ireland, an astonishing 40,000 interlocking columns of rock, was built by the Irish giant Finn McCool so that he could walk across the sea to Scotland to fight another giant. Further, stories of giant's dot Norse legends and ancient Greek mythology. Perhaps if giants did exist, as these records across countless cultures suggest, then the Book of Enoch is less allegorical than it might originally appear, less fantastical myth and more grounded in actual history. It is interesting to note that for centuries, the Book of Enoch was an important part of both Christian and Jewish religious traditions. Many, if not most, sects accepted the book as scripture. Further, some have even suggested that the Book of Enoch was the inspiration for the Book of Genesis, due to their many parallels and overlapping stories. The question is thus, what happened? Why is the Book of Enoch not part of the Bible? To answer this, we must go back to the early centuries after the death of Jesus Christ. Far from the rigid canon of 39 Old Testament and 27 New Testament books that we know as the Bible today. Originally, there were numerous gospels and religious texts which made up the broad spectrum of Christian tradition. As the Christian religion grew after the death of Jesus, the burgeoning Christian church needed to know which texts should be read and followed, which teachings should be applied, which texts would be deemed as acceptable and divinely inspired. The church needed, out of diversity, to create uniformity, they needed an official canon. In a story popularized in modern times by Dan Brown's seminal work The Da Vinci Code, this canonization is remembered as happening, somewhat nefariously, at the Council of Nicaea in the 4th century. There, according to the story, Emperor Constantine and other high-ranking church authorities shaped the Christian canon to conform to their own secret agenda. Unfortunately, this is not historically accurate. The Council of Nicaea did not determine the official Christian canon. Do not blame Dan Brown, the famed philosopher Voltaire, made a similar assertion in the 1700s. But while the story may not be factually accurate, it is accurate in a sense. High ranking members of the church certainly did select what to include in the official biblical canon, they argued, pulled strings, cast their opponents as heretics, and almost certainly sought to expand their own power. It just did not take place at a single council, but rather, as a much longer process between the 1st and 4th centuries. It is generally understood that by the end of the 4th century, the process was complete and the Bible was officially set without the Book of Enoch. How could something as influential, if not vital, as the Book of Enoch be left out? To answer this question, one might examine other gospels which were also censored from the final product. Consider the Gospel of Peter, a fragment of which was found in Egypt in 1886, which tells the long-missing story of a resurrected Jesus leaving his tomb and features two gigantic angels and a floating cross that talks "And they heard a voice from the heavens, saying, 'Thou hast preached to them that sleep.' "And a response was heard from the cross, 'Yea.'" Or, consider the Gospel of Mary, that notorious work in which Mary Magdalene is named not only as one of Jesus' disciples, but his favorite one, perhaps even his wife. Within this gospel, the disciple Peter asks why he and the other disciples should listen to Mary, a woman, to which Matthew responds, "If the Savior made her worthy, 'who are you then, for your part, to cast her aside?' "Surely the Savior knows her full well." "That is why he has loved her more than us." Like the Book of Enoch, these gospels tell extraordinary and history-challenging stories. Perhaps then, it should be no surprise that these texts were censored out by early power brokers of the official Christian canon. It makes sense that the Book of Enoch may have been totally forgotten if not for its survival in small orthodox sects of Ethiopian Jews. In fact, the only pre-modern version of the text was written in Ge'ez, an ancient African language. It was this version which Richard Laurence, the Archbishop of Cashel, used in 1821 to produce the first ever English translation of the book, the version used to inform study of the Dead Sea Scrolls. Curiously, though the Book of Enoch was omitted from the established Christian canon and subsequently forgotten in all but the most obscure corners of religious tradition and theological study, the Bible does contain numerous references to it. There are references to the Nephilim in Genesis and Numbers. Genesis also contains an extensive recounting of Enoch's lineage. The Book of Hebrews describes how "God had taken Enoch away," seemingly a reference to his being taken to heaven via fiery chariot before the Great Flood. Jude, meanwhile, contains an entire paragraph transcribed almost word-for-word from Enoch, suggesting that the Book may, in fact, have served as an early inspiration for established biblical texts. Further, Corinthians 11:5-6 contains instructions from St. Paul that women should cover their heads while in church. This, seemingly a direct reference to the fact that the Watchers in the Book of Enoch were attracted to women with long flowing hair. This is a practice which remains in Roman Catholicism and Islam to this day. Though it was censored, even forgotten, the Book of Enoch never truly disappeared. There is something deeper behind the Book of Enoch and its incredible stories, something which goes beyond simply whether it is part of the Christian canon. It has been pointed out that Enoch, the 7th patriarch of the Bible, seems to reflect the 7th antediluvian king, Engendering, in Babylonian tradition. The ancient Greeks believed Enoch to be the same as the god Hermes, while ancient Egyptians had someone similar in their own tradition. The examples could continue, and so it must be asked, why does Enoch, no matter his name, keep appearing in the traditions of the ancients? The answer may go back further than the Greeks, Egyptians, or even the Babylonians, back to the ancient Sumerians. According to Sumerian texts, earth was visited by a group of supernatural beings sometime in the distant past. These visitors are described in Sumerian tradition in a way that is eerily like descriptions of the Watchers in the Book of Enoch. Instead of Watchers, however, Sumerians called these beings the Anunnaki, which literally means "those who came from the heavens". They were gods, to the Sumerians to modern thinkers like Zacharia Sitchin and Erich von Daeiken, they were an ancient race of aliens who came to earth. Interestingly, Sumerian texts tell stories of these Anunnaki, much like the Watchers, beginning to interbreed with human beings, creating an entirely new species in the process, reflecting the creation of the Nephilim. Like the gods of the Book of Enoch, the Anunnaki became angered with the condition of the earth and brought about a great flood. Is it possible the Book of Enoch, as well as other related traditions, are simply retelling the older Sumerian story of the Anunnaki? Consider the Agricultural Revolution, which began around 10,000 BCE, during which time human beings transitioned from a lifestyle of hunting and gathering to one of agriculture and settlement. According to historical record, as early as 9500 BCE, in what is now modern Kurdistan, barley, wheat, and rye were being cultivated, oats, peas, and lentils were being grown, while goats and sheep were domesticated. Some 500 years after that, copper and lead smelting were taking place in the region, alongside weaving and pottery making. Additionally, this ancient Kurdish culture was the first to develop a script, standing as one of humanity's earliest literate societies. Some have asked how human beings could have made this jump so fast. Interestingly, the Kurdish people claim to be the descendants of the "Children of the Djinn" the Children of Spirits. Is this an ancient cultural reference to the procreation between Anunnaki and human women? According to the Sumerians, it was the Anunnaki who brought advanced knowledge and technology to human beings, lending a helping hand, as it were, to the progression of human civilization. Many have suggested that this explains seemingly impossible monuments like the pyramids of Giza or Teotihuacan, those ancient monuments of "extraordinary sophistication" which is completely unexplained by the cultural "and social circumstances of historical record." Perhaps this also explains how human beings were able to transition from nomadic hunter-gatherers to sophisticated civilizations in a historically insignificant amount of time. Incredibly, the Book of Enoch describes an almost identical process taking place, with the Watchers mirroring the Anunnaki in providing humans with advanced knowledge and technology. They teach humans metallurgy and mining, science, and medicine, how to read and write, and how to read the stars, they teach humans to wear cosmetics and make jewelry and reveal the secrets of the art of war. The Book of Enoch 8:1-3a reads, "And Azazel taught men to make swords "and knives and shields and breastplates "and made known to them the metals [of the earth] "and the art of working them and bracelets and ornaments "and the use of antimony and the beautifying of the eyelids "and all kinds of costly stones and all coloring tinctures. "And there arose much godlessness "and they committed fornication and they were led astray "and became corrupt in all their ways." Was the Book of Enoch, in this way, merely reflecting and retelling the story of the Anunnaki? It is interesting that the most common example given of something "completely unexplained by the cultural "and social circumstances of historical record.", something the Anunnaki must surely have helped ancient humans with, are the Egyptian pyramids. According to the ancient Arabian historian Al-Maqrizi, these pyramids were built by a king named Saurid, who lived before the Great Flood. Incidentally, Saurid translated into Hebrew, is Enoch. Consider elsewhere in the Book of Enoch, in a chapter in which Enoch bears witness to "the secrets of the lightnings" and "the secrets of the thunder." Some have suggested, this chapter is meant to illuminate the riddles of energy and electricity. Again, this relates directly to the Anunnaki, who many believe have been trying to reveal similar secrets to human beings through crop circles for some time. In our latest video, called Crop Circles Contain Blueprints for Free Energy Devices, we talked how in only the past few decades, crop circles have appeared across the world detailing complex mathematical equations, magnetic diagrams and motors, mechanical routers and the field lines of an electrical charge, the work, according to some, of the Anunnaki. In fact, consider Enoch's description of his journey to meet the gods while keeping in mind the UFO sightings which often accompany and compliment these crop circles, "I was taken to a kind of floating palace," Enoch said. "It was huge, like carved glass. "The floor had glass plates. "Through the floor you could see the stars "we were crossing." One might wonder if the "fiery chariot" which took Enoch away before the Great Flood was not in fact, an alien spacecraft. It may seem hard to believe that stories as mind-blowing as these, of Watchers and Anunnaki and Nephilim giants, stories which permeated ancient cultures for thousands of years, should be largely forgotten, the Sumerians erased from the pantheon of ancient civilizations, the Book of Enoch censored from biblical canon. However, given the way these stories fundamentally reshape human history and redefine what human beings are their exclusion is perhaps no surprise. Yet, maybe these stories were not, in fact, totally erased. Consider the well-known biblical story of Adam and Eve and the Garden of Eden. Read it not literally, nor philosophically, but as an allegory. Read it metaphorically. God creates Adam to watch over the earth, much as the gods send the Watchers to do in the Book of Enoch. From Adam's rib, God creates Eve, Adam and Eve procreate, representing the interbreeding between the Watchers and human females. Adam and Eve are told they can eat anything they want in the Garden of Eden, except fruit from the tree of knowledge of good and evil. Of course, they do eat from the tree of knowledge, representative of the Watchers bringing advanced technology and knowledge to human beings, which perhaps they were not mentally evolved enough to handle. Just as eating from the tree of knowledge provided Adam and Eve with the knowledge of God, so too did the book of Enoch describe how the Watchers "revealed the eternal secrets "which were preserved for heaven, "which men were striving to learn." Reading the story of Adam and Eve this way, it is easy to see the parallels between it and the Book of Enoch. And perhaps that is just the point. Perhaps the people who wrote the story of Adam and Eve were simply retelling the stories in the Book of Enoch in their own way, retelling the Sumerian story of the Anunnaki, as so many across religions and cultures had before them, inserting this crucial piece of human history allegorically into their own religious canon, so that these ancient records could continue to exist. What is human history? Is it that which is understood through officially sanctioned history books? Or is it something deeper, something more incredible, if, perhaps, forgotten? Maybe the answer has been hiding in plain sight the whole time. The Book of Enoch Banned from The Bible Tells the True Story of Humanity
